TO THE CLASS

Since the Class assembled to celebrate its twenty-fifth anniversary of graduation, it has been passing through that period where eventful changes in the lifework of members are so comparatively few that it has seemed futile to try to obtain from them details of their lives during the past five years with the expectation of gathering therefrom sufficient material for a complete Class report. At the same time, certain matters of Class history, resulting from some changes during the past five years, will be of interest to the Class upon their meeting together for another anniversary, and the purpose of this pamphlet is to set them down.

Taking into account the members upon whom degrees of A.B. were conferred upon Commencement, 1909, the Class included 213 recipients of that degree. Up to the time of the twenty-fifth anniversary of graduation, 33 of these had died, leaving 180 living at that time. (The twenty-fifth anniversary report gives the number of living at 181, owing to the fact that Jesse Fletcher died between the going-to-press of the report and the time of our celebration.) Of the 180, 7 have died during the last five years, leaving the number of regular members now living 173.

Of temporary and associate members there were 40 included in the last report, 16 of whom had died before the twenty-fifth anniversary and 4 of whom have died since, leaving 20 living at the present time.

Not included in the foregoing were two temporary members who had not been heard from since they left college, — Louis Wilmer Kendall, who left college in senior year, and Benjamin Bishop, who left in freshman year. Kendall died in July, 1913, and Bishop died in June, 1913.

From time to time there have been published in the Harvard Graduates' Magazine notices of members who have died, and as these may not have come to the attention of all the members of the Class, they are reproduced in this pamphlet.

There are reprinted from the same source accounts of two dinners of the Class; a list of marriages and births of children, occurring since June, 1909, is given; and at the end of the pamphlet will be found a list of addresses corrected to the present time.

THOMAS K. CUMMINS, Secretary.

REGULAR MEMBERS

JESSE FLETCHER died at Turtle Lake, Michigan, May 31, 1909. He was born in Indianapolis, Indiana, February 4, 1862, the son of Stoughton Alfonso and Ruth Elizabeth (Barrows) Fletcher. He prepared for college with a private tutor. After graduating from Harvard he was connected with the Atlas Engine Works of Indianapolis, as treasurer, until the spring of 1895, when he sold his interest and retired from active business. During the next ten years he passed most of his time in travelling and managing his private business. In 1905 he served a term in the House of Representatives of the Indiana State Legislature, having been elected on the Republican ticket to represent Marion County. He was much interested in out-of-door sports, hunting and fishing. Since his retirement from business he had spent a large part of his time in those pursuits. For two years before his death he had suffered serious ill health. He was unmarried.

BENJAMIN WILLIAMS WELLS
1861–1912

BENJAMIN WILLIAMS WELLS died suddenly of apoplexy in Boston, Massachusetts, on Thursday, January 18, 1912. He was born in Cambridge, Mass., on October 15, 1861, the son of Peter F. and Isabella Wells. He prepared for college at Chauncy Hall and Hopkinson's schools. After graduating he became a member of the firm of E. Williams & Company, of Boston, a house that had been engaged for many years in shipping and trading between this country and South America and Dutch Guiana. In 1896 he was appointed by Mayor Quincy of Boston Superintendent of Streets, in which position he had charge of paving, watering and cleaning the streets, and of sewers, bridges, ferries and the sanitary department of the city. He surrendered this position in 1900 and from then until 1905 was in the business of real estate and mining. In March, 1905, he was appointed Fire Commissioner of Boston by Mayor Collins, to fill the unexpired term of Fire Commissioner Russell's office, made vacant by his death. He was reappointed to the office by Mayor Fitzgerald and held it until removed in January, 1908, during the administration of the opposite political party. He was a very active and interested administrator of the Boston Fire Department, and conducted it in such a way as to gain the affection and respect of his men as well as the confidence of the property owners and underwriters of the city. After retiring from the Fire Department, he was engaged in the business of real estate and insurance, holding no other public office, except that in 1908 he was appointed by Governor Guild a member of the Commission to distribute the Firemen's Relief Fund. He served for three years as secretary of the Young Men's Democratic Club of Massachusetts, and for several years as chairman of the Executive Committee of the Democratic State Committee. He had also served as a member of the Democratic City Committee and for several years as chairman of a Democratic Ward Committee. The funeral services were held at the Arlington Street Church, Boston, on Saturday, January 20. They were conducted by the rector of the church, Rev. Paul Revere Frothingham, who was assisted by our classmate, S. A. Eliot.

THOMAS JEFFERSON COOLIDGE, JR.

THOMAS JEFFERSON COOLIDGE, JR., died in Magnolia, Massachusetts, on April 14, 1912, after an illness which had lasted several years but which only during the last few months of his life had become so acute as to keep him from the management of affairs. He was born in Boston, Massachusetts, on March 16, 1863, the son of Thomas Jefferson Coolidge (Harvard, 1850), and Hetty Sullivan (Appleton) Coolidge. He received his preparatory education at Mr. G. W. C. Noble's private school in Boston, and entered Harvard with the Class in 1880. From the beginning he was one of the prominent leaders in Class and College affairs. At the first meeting of the Class, as freshmen, in October, 1880, he was elected president and continued to hold the office throughout the college course, and as long as the office itself existed. In the junior year he was manager of the University Baseball Association and treasurer of the Athletic Association. In the senior year he was president of both of the foregoing and vice-president of the Hasty Pudding Club. In athletics his event was the half-mile run. This he won in freshman year, both in the College Championship and Intercollegiate meetings. At Commencement he was first marshal of the Class. After graduating he passed a year in a journey around the world with two classmates; during the following two years he took graduate courses in government and law at Harvard and then began his career in banking. In 1890 he established the Old Colony Trust Company in Boston, of which he was the first president and the chief officer until the time of his death, when through his able management it had grown to be the largest institution of its kind in New England and among the largest in the country. Beside this memorable achievement, he had represented Boston interests actively as director at various times in many of the most important railroad and industrial corporations of the country. Throughout the years of a tensely occupied life after graduation, the Class as a body and as individuals received his never-failing and immediate interest and co-operation. The day passed by the Class at his summer place at Magnolia at the time of the twenty-fifth anniversary of graduation has always been remembered as the bright particular event of the occasion and one of the happy experiences of a lifetime, through the influence of the personal touch which lent such charm to his hospitality. While the large responsibilities of his business life required the concentration upon them of his principal interest, he gave generously of his counsel, encouragement and support in matters of art, literature and civic duty. His interesting collections of pictures, books and ceramics mark the varied activities of an unusually industrious life. He was married in Boston, on September 30, 1891, to Clara, daughter of Charles Walter Amory (Harvard, '63) and Elizabeth (Gardner) Amory, of Boston, who with four sons, survives him.

CHARLES ROBERTSON SAUNDERS
1862–1912

CHARLES ROBERTSON SAUNDERS died in Cambridge, Massachusetts, on April 16, 1912, after an illness of only a few days. He was born in Cambridge on November 22, 1862, the son of Charles Hicks and Mary Brooks (Hall) Saunders. He prepared for college at the Washington Grammar School and Cambridge High School in Cambridge. He entered Harvard in the autumn of 1879 with the Class of 1883, but on account of illness contracted in the summer of 1880, he was obliged to leave college for a year, so that he began the sophomore year in the autumn of 1881 with the Class of 1884, with which he graduated. The next three or four years he divided between travel and study of law, graduating from the Harvard Law School in 1888 with the degree of LL.B., and was duly admitted to practice at the Suffolk Bar of Massachusetts. After some time passed in work in the Law department of the New York & New England Railroad, he engaged in the practice of law independently in Boston. While he always continued his practice, he devoted the greater part of his time and attention to politics and political and social questions. In 1896 he was elected a member of the Common Council of Boston, and in 1897 was elected to the Massachusetts House of Representatives, where he served for four years, 1898–1901. During the years 1896–1901 he was a member of the Republican City Committee of Boston, and a member of the Executive Committee of the Republican Club of Massachusetts. In June, 1901, he resigned his seat as representative and was immediately appointed by the Mayor a member of the Board of Election Commissioners of Boston. Upon the expiration of his term he declined a reappointment. During his entire career he was a close student and energetic worker in connection with the questions that enlisted his special attention, notably those in opposition to woman suffrage and the abolition of capital punishment. His work on those two particular subjects was very active and convincing both in the legislature, during his term there, and after its conclusion in outside campaigns. He was well-known among his colleagues for the accuracy and completeness of his knowledge of facts and figures pertaining to the causes in which he interested himself. He was particularly earnest in advocating all measures looking to the preservation of the traditions and dignity of his Commonwealth. He was unmarried.

HENRY CLAY SHAW
1862–1912

HENRY CLAY SHAW, the son of Melvin and Atlantique Alloway (Butler) Shaw, was born in East Abington, now Rockland, Massachusetts, on March 31, 1862. He prepared for college at the Rockland High School and with Dr. E. R. Humphreys in Boston. His death occurred very suddenly at his summer residence at Belgrade, Maine, on Friday, August 23, 1912. He had been engaged in teaching during the whole period of his life since graduating from Harvard. During the latter part of 1884, he was principal of the high school in Bethlehem, New Hampshire. In 1885 he was successively principal of the high school in Petersham, Massachusetts, and of the high school in South Dartmouth, Massachusetts. From September 1, 1885, until July 1, 1887, he was instructor in sciences at Highland Military Academy, Worcester, Massachusetts. On September 1, 1887, he was appointed junior master of the English High School, Boston, of which he subsequently became master. In June, 1902, he was transferred, at his own request, to the Roxbury High School where, at the time of his death, he held the position of master head of the commercial branches in the school. He was also president of the council of the commercial branches of the Boston high schools.

He was always interested in schoolboy athletics, and in 1889 he was on a committee to act as an advisory board on athletics. He was a member of the Mercantile Library Association, of the Harvard Teachers' Club, the Massachusetts Teachers' Club, the High and Latin Masters' Club of Boston and the Harvard Club of Boston.

He was married in Stoughton, Massachusetts, on October 19, 1889, to Mary Catherine, daughter of Sylvanus Colby and Elizabeth Antoinette (Bodkin) Phinney of Stoughton, who survives him.

GEORGE WILLIAM KEMP
1860–1914

GEORGE WILLIAM KEMP died in New York on December 24, 1912. He was the son of William and Louisa Elizabeth (Jones) Kemp. He was born in New York, May 7, 1860, and prepared for college at Cutler's School in New York. He rowed on the Class crew in senior year, was anchor on the Class tug-of-war team in sophomore and junior years, and at various times competed in running events at the 100 yards dash and 220 yards dash. He was a member of the Institute of 1770, Hasty Pudding and Zeta Psi. After leaving college, he entered on a business career with the firm of Lanman and Kemp in New York, wholesale druggists. He travelled for about two years in Spain, Canada, the Argentine Republic and Brazil. In 1894 he was admitted to partnership in the house. He was a member of a number of social clubs, of the New York Chamber of Commerce, and the Society of Sons of the Revolution. He was married in New York on November 26, 1889, to Margaret Shepherd, daughter of Alexander and Elizabeth (Shepherd) Hutton, who survives him with a daughter, Margaret, born August 12, 1890.

Henry Elbert Barnes
1863–1912

HENRY ELBERT BARNES died on April 19, 1914, in Minneapolis, Minnesota. He was born in Peru, Illinois, June 24, 1863, the son of Henry Elbert and Elizabeth Sessions (Carpenter) Barnes. He prepared for college at Phillips Andover Academy, Andover, Massachusetts. After obtaining the degree of A.B. at Harvard in 1884, he went to Minneapolis to live. For two years he was engaged in business with the Washburn Mills Company, manufacturers of flour. He then began the study of law and was admitted to the Minnesota bar in 1889, and from that time devoted himself to the practice of that profession.

He always displayed a keen interest in Harvard affairs, was one of the organizers of the Minnesota Harvard Club, and in 1897 he was one of a small number who gathered in Indianapolis for the purpose of forming an association of Harvard Clubs. For about five years thereafter he was actively interested in advancing the growth of the association and was a prominent member of the managing committee at the time the Associated Clubs met in Minneapolis and St. Paul in 1901.

Nathaniel Greene Pendleton
1862–1914

NATHANIEL GREENE PENDLETON died suddenly in Brooklyn, New York, on May 13, 1914. He was the son of Elliott Hunt and Emma (Gaylord) Pendleton. He was born in Cincinnati, Ohio, on August 9, 1862. He prepared for college at St. Paul's School, Concord, New Hampshire. He was admitted to the practice of law in the state of Ohio on December 2, 1884. Two years later he entered the banking business and was connected with the Commercial Bank in Cincinnati, Ohio. He left Cincinnati in December, 1890, for Davenport, Iowa, to take the management of the Davenport Gas and Electric Light Company. The company was sold in January, 1896, and he returned to Cincinnati to resume the practice of law. In October, 1905, he moved to New York, where he continued his law practice and engaged in one or two outside business interests until the time of his death. He was married in Watertown, Wisconsin, June 14, 1894, to Adelaide Elizabeth, daughter of Rev. Dr. Myron Alfred and Frances Adelaide (Mitchell) Johnson, who survives him with three sons, — Nathaniel Greene, Jr., Edmund Johnson and George Gaylord.

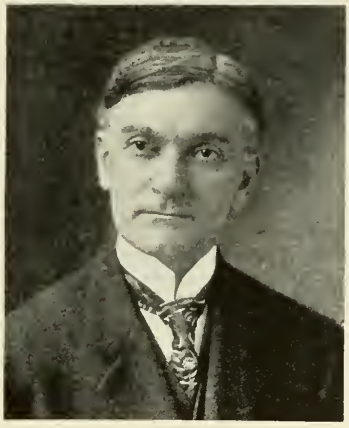
TEMPORARY MEMBERS

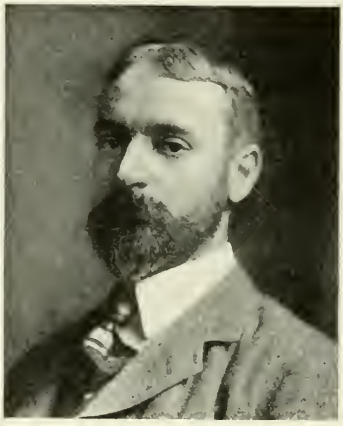
GILBERT HUBBARD TURNER
1861–1909

GILBERT HUBBARD TURNER died at New Rochelle, New York, on July 29, 1909. He was born in Chicago, Illinois, October 22, 1861, the son of J. Spencer and Cornelia J. (Eddy) Turner. He prepared for college at Professor Overheiser's School for Boys in Brooklyn, New York, and at Phillips Academy, Exeter, New Hampshire. He left college at the end of the freshman year and became a member of the firm of Brinckerhoff, Turner & Company, manufacturers of cotton duck, continuing a member of the firm until 1899, when he retired from business. He lived in the Adirondack Mountains from then until 1907, when he moved to New Rochelle.



FRANK PHILIP SCHMITT
1862–1910

FRANK PHILIP SCHMITT, a member of the Class during freshman year, died in Vevay, Switzerland, on September 30, 1910. He was born in Louisville, Kentucky, on August 5, 1862. He prepared for college at Adams Academy and at J. P. Hopkinson's School in Boston. After leaving Harvard he attended the Albany Law School and was admitted to the bar in Ottawa, Illinois, in December, 1885. From that time until his death he had practised his profession in Chicago and had taken an active part in state politics. In 1904 he was appointed Master in Chancery of the Superior Court, which office he resigned in 1908. In 1906 he was elected a member of the Illinois State Senate and was chairman of the Deep Waterway Committee of that body. He helped to revise and reform the insurance laws of the state. At the time of his death he was a candidate on the Republican ticket for judge of the Circuit Court. He was married in Chicago, in 1893, to Theodosia Murray, who survives him.



CHARLES LELAND HARRISON
1861–1913

CHARLES LELAND HARRISON died in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, on May 13, 1913. He was the son of John and Emily Gardiner (Leland) Harrison. He was born in Philadelphia on August 18, 1861, and prepared for college at St. Paul's School, Concord, New Hampshire. He entered Harvard with the Class in 1880 but left college in the junior year. From that time until June, 1903, he was associated with the firm of Harrison Brothers and Company, manufacturers of heavy acids and chemicals and white leads and paints. At the time the business was sold in 1903 he was general superintendent and vice-president of the company. From that time until his death he had been without business occupation. He was married in Philadelphia on April 29, 1886, to Catherine Yates, daughter of Septimus Henry and Mary (Yates) Norris of Philadelphia, who survives him with two sons, Henry Norris, born May 18, 1887, and John, Jr., born October 30, 1890.

Louis Wilmer Kendall
1860–1913

LOUIS WILMER KENDALL died in Chicago, Illinois, early in July, 1913. He was the son of Henry Wilmer and Frances (Collins) Kendall. He was born in Cincinnati, Ohio, on December 26, 1860, and prepared for college at Adams Academy, Quincy, Massachusetts. He entered Harvard with the Class in 1880 but did not remain to take a degree, leaving in the senior year. While in college he played on the University football team during every year from Freshman to Senior, and also took part in the tumbling events in the winter meetings in the gymnasium. He lived in Quincy, Illinois, until within the last six or seven years, when he went to Chicago to become the resident representative of the Frederick Stern Pharmaceutical Company, Detroit, Michigan, which position he held at the time of his death. He left a widow, who, before her marriage, was Miss Cora Clark, daughter of J. H. Clark of Quincy, Illinois.

BENJAMIN BISHOP who entered college with the Class and remained during freshman year, but who was not heard from after he left college and failed to answer communications addressed to him, died in Crownking, Arizona, in June, 1913. He was born in Leavenworth County, Kansas, June 24, 1859. He was the son of Benjamin and Eliza Ann (McHolland) Bishop. He prepared for college with M. L. Perrin, private tutor.

ASSOCIATE MEMBERS

HENRY NIEBUHR RICHARDS
1862–1912

HENRY NIEBUHR RICHARDS died in Boston on December 15, 1912. He was the son of Francis Cedric and Ann Lummus (Wheeler) Richards. He was born in Brookline, Massachusetts, November 6, 1862. He prepared for college at William N. Eayres' School in Boston, and entered Harvard in 1880 as a special student in the Lawrence Scientific School. He left at the end of the sophomore year, but during the two years of his residence in Cambridge he was closely identified socially with the Class. In 1885 he became a member of the firm of E. E. and H. N. Richards, engaged in the business of real estate and insurance and general management and care of property. He served for seven years in the Massachusetts Volunteer Militia. He enlisted in Troop A Cavalry, Second Brigade, was promoted corporal, and was finally transferred to the Brigade Non-Commissioned Staff, where he served as color sergeant, provost-sergeant, and finally ended his term of service as provost-marshal, with the rank of captain. He was a member of several social clubs as well as yacht and hunting clubs. He was married in Boston on January 16, 1901, to Mary Derby, daughter of Augustus and Lucy Anna (Hobbs) Flagg, of Boston, who survives him.

CLASS DINNERS

1911

On February 3, 1911, the Class dined at the Harvard Club in New York. While it has been customary for the Secretary to arrange for Class dinners and invite the Class to attend, in this case the process was reversed, as the Class made the arrangements for the dinner entirely unbeknown to the Secretary and invited him to be its guest. The entire affair was most successfully carried out, the Secretary being obliged to admit, reluctantly, that he could not have done it half as well himself, and the Class established a new record for itself by disproving completely the popular theory that the office of Class Secretary is a thankless one. Fifty-one members were present. Gordon Abbott presided and Robert S. Minturn acted as toastmaster, introducing very happily the following, who contributed to the enjoyment of the evening with speech or song: — E. A. S. Clarke, F. C. Cobb, J. M. Codman, Jr., E. S. Drown, S. A. Eliot, C. E. Hamlin, O. F. Hibbard, J. H. McIntosh, W. L. McPherson, T. A. Mullen, N. G. Pendleton, L. E. Sexton, and W. F. Wesselhoeft. At the close of the dinner, Abbott, as Chairman of the Class Committee, presented to the Secretary, on behalf of the Class, a silver cup of a particularly beautiful and graceful design. The dinner was a very enjoyable one and made especially so to the visiting members by the hospitality of the New York men.

1913

Thirty-three members of the Class met at dinner at the Harvard Club of New York on the evening of March 14, 1913. Gordon Abbott, Chairman of the Class Committee, presided and acted as toastmaster. Responding to his call, the following men spoke during the evening: — Baylies, Chapman, Clarke, Cobb, Drown, Frothingham, Frank Hamlin, Hardwick, Hibbard, Minturn, Mullen, Osborne, Sexton and Walker.

Osborne gave much pleasure by rendering the favorite songs and choruses of the Class on the piano, and the entertainment was concluded by the reading by Chapman of a poem, in his customary happy vein, which rounded out the enjoyment of the occasion very completely.
